GENERAL NEWS.

[By Telegraph to the Oregonian.]

Clearing House Transactions.

[New] York, Nov 17—To-morrow the Public will [print its] usual weekly table of business transactions. The Public comments thus: We doubt [if the] exchanges exclusive of those arising from [specula]tions ever were larger than they were [last week]. The aggregate outside of New York has [illegible] twice during a week ending No[vember] [illegible] of November last, but not greatly. The aggregate [in] this city, after deducting for sales of stock [shows an] increase of 36.7 per cent. Probably an [increase] caused by sales of stock never were so [large] within $20,000,000 of what they were [illegible]. The increase here was partly due to [sales] of grain. Sales of wheat amounted to [illegible] bushels, of corn to 2,140,000 bushels, of [illegible] 2,000 bushels. Dealings in cotton [illegible] large, but all these account for [illegible] of the exchanges, which clearly in[dicate] the volume of general business larger than ever before. Outside this city also [illegible] show an increase at almost every city [illegible] with the extraordinary activity [illegible] when the collapse of the towering [illegible] at hand. On the whole, the average [illegible] reference to relative importation of [illegible] is lower than it was a year ago; [illegible] in exchanges therefore indicates a [illegible] in quantities of produce sold, and [illegible] of sales effected last year of a speculative [char]acter was decidedly larger than it is now. [illegible] business is not only larger, there[fore] [illegible] at this time last year, but altogether [illegible] order in character. Already there [illegible] of uncertainty in stocks and money [illegible] which may cause a reaction for [illegible] that which was seen about [illegible]. The important difference is that [illegible] markets are less influenced by [illegible] the market for securities [illegible] appears to be upon a more solid [basis].

At the office of Sid[ney Dillon the] reporter was authorized to state that [there was not] the slightest justification in fact. [illegible] the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad [illegible] that it was intended to continue [illegible] but as far as any consolidation [illegible] concerned there is no ground [illegible] any shape in connection with that [illegible] officials of the Wabash, St Louis [illegible] company said that whatever consolidation [illegible] there might be in the future [illegible] present time justified the coloring to [illegible] published this morning.

Five hundred and ninety thousand shares remain for public subscription. The issue will be made at par, 25 francs being paid at subscription, 100 on allotment, and the rest as required. The total cost is estimated at 600,000,000 francs. The sum necessary for completing the canal over and above capital will be raised by the issue of obligations. Five per cent interest is to be paid on shares during the execution of the work, as net profit. Eighty per cent is allotted to share-holders by terms of the concession. De Lesseps states that the contractors have sent in their estimate, according to which the construction of the canal will not cost 500,000,000 francs, and that he has provided by the memoranda, signed July 5th that the special American committee sitting in New York shall represent the interests of the company in the United States, as to all that relates to the observance of neutrality of the canal and settled by the law of concession of the republic of Columbia.

No Split in the Cabinet.

The News, in a leading article, denies that there is a split in the cabinet. It says there is no conclusion yet in regard to an early session of parliament. Every symptom points to increasing harmony within the cabinet.

THE AGITATION IN IRELAND.

Bright and Chamberlain's Position.

London, Nov 17—The Times, commenting on the reticence of Chamberlain, president of the board of trade and John Bright, M. P., at the opening of the Reform Club at Birmingham last night, says it was known the condition of Ireland was a subject of ministerial deliberations, and it was well understood there were serious differences among members of the cabinet as to what should be done, rightly or wrongly, and in this case we believe rightly. At Birmingham Ministers Bright and Chamberlain were credited with a resolution to resist to the utmost, we may say to the last, the adoption of any measures savoring of coercion.

The Cabinet Differences.

London, Nov 17—Reports of differences in the cabinet seem well founded. Bright and Chamberlain pronounced absolutely against coercion in Ireland. Several ministers favor the convocation of parliament in December to authorize a suspension of the habeas corpus act. No decision has been taken.

Proceedings Against Newspapers.

Dublin, Nov 17—At the weekly meeting of the land league Egan stated that the traversers intended to proceed against the Express and Mail newspapers for attempting to prejudice the jury and prevent the traversers from receiving a fair trial. An additional reward of £500 is offered for the discovery of the murderer of Lord Mountmorris.

Landlord Shot.

It is rumored that a landlord has been shot in County Cork.

Meeting of Catholics—Land League.

London, Nov 17—A monster meeting of the Catholics was held at Belfast yesterday at which sympathy was expressed for members of the Land League.

Cabinet Differences.

The Times in a leading article repeats its statement of yesterday that there are differences in the cabinet. It says the arguments in favor of coercion in Ireland are weighed as strongly as ever and that the cabinet has certainly not dreamed of setting them aside. On the other hand, the objections of Bright and Chamberlain have been surrendered. It may be assumed that the question is an open one, but every day tends to its settlement in a sense favorable to the retention of Bright and Chamberlain who have not perhaps converted their colleagues to their views, but have presented a petition the other way and it will soon not be worth while to attempt to enforce the opposite views.

Order Countermanded.

Ballinrobe, Nov 17—There is every reason to believe the order for the dispatch of 300 soldiers to reinforce the troops at Ballinrobe has been countermanded as the expedition to Lord Erne's residence has been abandoned. Boycott states that he will leave with the troops but will return shortly.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Coin and Bullion.

Chicago, Nov 17—The Inter Ocean's Washington special says the director of the mint estimates the gold coin and bullion of the country November 1st at [illegible] 9,000,000. Bullion at the mints, $35,000,000. This does not include bullion held by miners and private parties. The silver coinage to November 1st was $[illegible] 000,000.

Expecting an Office.

The fact that General Miles bade his soldiers formal adieu on leaving them to come to Washington indicates that he expected it to be a final leave taking and probably that he would be appointed signal officer.

A Bone of Contention.

The Ohio senatorial question is likely to give the republicans much trouble and may lose them the temporary control of the senate. The person who succeeds to Garfield's place in the senate must have his claim passed upon before he takes his seat and now probably the democrats will compel him to wait a long time. The hitch consists in a legal question as to whether Garfield's place in the senate is vacant whenever he chooses to withdraw or whether he must first become actually a senator from he can resign. Garfield will be here shortly and it is expected that he will then tender [illegible] the secretary of the treasury.

Popular Feeling.

The report has gained circulation that some of the prominent citizens of California [illegible] claim that inasmuch as the people of those states [illegible] chose them through a misapprehension being deceived by the forged Chinese letter, they are [illegible] duty bound to [illegible] for Garfield. As neither state is needed by Garfield not much importance is attached to the report, except as far as it shows a [illegible] popular feeling against the democratic party.

They have Earned their Money.

Chicago, Nov 17—The Inter Ocean's Washington special says: Don Alex H. Stephens says he will vote to pay the deputy marshals and supervisors. They have earned their money under the law. He believes other democrats take the same view.

Omens Portend a Victory.

(From the New York Financial News, Nov 4.)

"Tuesday morning," said a broker yesterday, "I rose and did my duty as I always do. I voted the straight democratic ticket from top to bottom; then I spent the day pleasantly in the country and went to bed calmly and hopefully at night. When I woke up this morning my paper, which is the World, was not lying in its usual place but out on the sidewalk and there was no one that passed by poor to do it reverence, not not so much as to look at it. My log always brings it up to my room and over he refused to touch it. I had to ring the bell before he would condescend to pick it up. These are signs I said but, O Lord, they don't portend a victory."

The Bonanza Law Suit.

San Francisco, Nov 17—J. C. Flood was to-day examined as a witness for a notary public in the case of Burke vs Flood et al. The testimony of the same being as to checks given by Con. Virginia to the Pacific Mill Co which were paid to him, and the amount entered on Flood & O'Brien's books. As Hager, bookkeeper, keeping the accounts of Fair, superintendent of Con Virginia, signed drafts in favor of the Mill Co for working ores and [illegible] Mackay also. The Mill Co kept no bank account in San Francisco but did in Virginia City at the Bank of California and agency of the Nevada Bank. Could not say that the Pacific Mill Co had sold bullion to the Carson mint. Bullion sent by it to the Nevada bank was sold and accounts of sales made to Hager and sometimes to Mackay and Fair. He did not know who first suggested incorporating the Mill Co. It was organized to mill Con Virginia and other ores but had milled some for Crown Point and Hale & Norcross. The accounts here were all kept on Flood & O'Brien's books, Mackay & Fair having a larger interest.

The notary then required Mr Flood to produce these books and accounts for examination but met with a refusal. Application will be made for an order of court to produce them.

Elder was heard as assayer for Consolidated Virginia and Lowell is now secretary of the Pacific Mill Co at Virginia City.

Libel Suit.

San Francisco, Nov 17—For several days past the libel suit of Redman M. Price against Squire P. Dewey has been in progress in the superior court. The charge rests on the publication of a card by Dewey in the Alta, in which he refers jealously to the equity reports as showing that Price had swindled his own mother, sister and children out of their share of his father's estate. To-day the case was given to the jury, which, after a short absence, returned a verdict of not guilty. The case was [illegible] missed.

PESSIMISM A LA MODE.

Schopenhauer, the Waspish Apostle of Misery, the Coming Passion in Parisian Boudoirs.

[Correspondence New York World.]

Paris, Oct 20.—The Parisienne is frivolous. She is willing enough to admit that but she has her serious side. She thinks and reads, and unfortunately now she has taken to reading Schopenhauer. This, of course, compels everybody to read Schopenhauer. Most people on the first mention of his name think he is some new thing in music. They may be soon undeceived by an obliging Frenchman who, seeing society's crying want, has supplied it in a small handy volume of extracts now in great demand. This is a sort of toilet essence of Schopenhauer,—a few drops to be sprinkled on the memory before going down to dinner.

The Parisienne cares nothing for Schopenhauer's system—how should she? she does not understand it—but she likes his originality. There certainly was something out of the common way in the life of this well-to-do manhater. He had enough money for luxury, and the luxury he chose was easy contempt of mankind—more especially of its better half. A clean Diogenes with a comfortable hotel at Frankfort for his tub, he chaffed the race leisurely till it was time for him to die. His keynote was striking. He said that misery and not happiness was the essential condition of our being. He looked over the world and saw nothing but misery, with just occasional interludes of happiness to give the misery a fresh start. He liked to quote that most of all known rules for contentment—to reflect that there are thousands worse off than yourself. What does that prove, he would say, if not the universality of wretchedness? But some people are never convinced—very well. "Do you wish at a glance to enlighten yourself on this point and to know if pleasure is greater than pain, or the reverse? Well, simply compare the impressions of the animal who devours another with the impressions of the one devoured." This does seem pretty decisive. Beyond all question the eaten has a good deal more annoyance in this process than the eater has fun,—what with the bones and things.

His views on love are a natural corollary of his views of life. He takes the nonsense and conceit out of the passion which pleases the French women, because they like to fancy that with them it still has some nonsense left. Love he tells us, is nothing but a politic illusion of Mother Nature for the perpetuation of the race. She fools us with a purpose and when the purpose is accomplished she lifts the illusion from our eyes. It is of no use grumbling or saying no whenever it suits her interests—and she is exactly like Great Britain in having a policy of interests alone—she will fool us again.

From love to woman is but a step and here the fashionable philosopher is truly awful but the Parisienne does not mind. There are a few of the new texts a la mode which you are expected to know by heart.

'The mere aspect of woman proves that she is destined neither for the great labors of intelligence nor for great material undertakings. She pays her debt to life not by action but by suffering. She ought therefore to obey man, and to be his patient companion [illegible] serenity to his mind.

'That which makes women [illegible] is that they [illegible] that they [illegible] themselves children [illegible]. They are only big babies all their lives [illegible] Look at a young girl [illegible] and singing to an infant [illegible] playing with it all day long [illegible] imagine what a man with the best will in the world [illegible].

'[illegible] She ornaments [illegible] a few years [illegible] the rest of her life. The object is that during those few years she may take strong possession of [illegible] make him undertake [illegible] the heavy charge of looking after her forever. [illegible] creature with [illegible] instrument necessary to assure her [illegible] with her habitual frugality has given them merely for use during the requisite time. [illegible] as the female ant loses her wings when they are no longer useful to her, so woman loses her beauty soon after her conquest is made. For this reason the young girls are [illegible] in their instincts [illegible] that their true vocation at that time of life is to make themselves loved.

'In the bottom of hearts women imagine that men are only made to earn money and women to spend it. If they are prevented from doing this during the lifetime of a husband they make up for it after his death.

'The lion has his teeth and his claws, the elephant and the boar have their tusks, the bull has his horns, the cuttle fish its ink. Nature has given woman for her defense and protection dissimulation as she has given man strength and the strength of his limbs. Hence the falsity, the treason, the ingratitude of women who perjure themselves readily in courts of justice that it has often been a question whether they ought to be allowed to take an oath. From time to time women who want for nothing are caught pilfering in the shops.'

'Men are only indifferent one to another, women are by nature enemies. The reason is that hostility which among men is limited to the members of each profession among women embraces the whole species as they have but one single business in life.

'Women have neither the sentiment nor the intelligence of music any more than of poetry or the plastic arts. All their taste in this direction is mere apeishness—a pure pretext and affectation stimulated by their desire to please.

'Women are and will remain in their ensemble the most accomplished and the most incurable philistines thanks to our social organization which is absurd to an extreme degree and which makes them share the title and situation of man no matter how elevated he may be. Thus they excite and stimulate the less honorable part of his ambition, and, as a natural consequence their domination and the tone they give corrupt modern society. The ancients took this view of them and the eastern peoples preserve it to our day. Both have better understood the part suitable to woman and her proper place. Our gallantry of the old fashioned French style, and our stupid veneration, have only served to make her as impertinent as the sacred apes of Benares, who may take any liberty with impunity by virtue of the false position they hold. What may be called the European woman is a sort of being that ought not to exist. Those who help in the house and look after the house ought to be the only women in the world.'

I was going to point out that the Parisienne had given the insolent the best answer in telling us to read him, as it speaks volumes for the indifference of her conscious strength. I was also going to say—but no, please do not expect me to do my duty by overwhelming him with the withering scorn he deserves. I really feel so uneasy about the whole thing that I begin to feel sorry I have written a word about it—only I thought you would like to know the coming winter fashions in mind.

ADVICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[From the Burlington Hawkeye.]

Never write with pen or ink. It is altogether too plain, and doesn't hold the mind of the editor and printers closely enough to their work.

If you are compelled to use ink, never use that vulgarity known as the blotting pad. If you drop a blot of ink on the page lick it off. The intelligent compositor loves nothing so dearly as to read through the smear; this will make twenty or thirty words. We have seen him hang over such a piece of copy half an hour, all the time swearing like a pirate, he felt so good.

Don't punctuate. We prefer to punctuate all manuscript sent to us. And don't use capitals. Then we can punctuate and capitalize it out of self, and your article when you see it in print will astonish, even if it does not suit you.

Don't try to write too plainly. It is a sign of plebeian origin and public school breeding. Poor writing is an indication of genius. It's about the only indication of genius that a great many men possess. Scrawl your article with your eyes shut and make every word as illegible as you can. We get the same price for it from the rag man as though it were covered with copper plate sentences.

Avoid all painstaking with proper names. We know the full name of every man, woman and child in the United States, and the merest hint at the names is sufficient. For instance, if you write a character something like a drunken figure "8" and then draw a wavy line, and the letter "M" and another waving line we will know at once that you mean Samuel Morrison even though you may think you mean Lemuel Messenger. It is a great mistake that proper names should be written properly.

Always write on both sides of the paper, and when you have filled both sides of every page, trail a line up and down every margin and back to the top of the first page, closing your article by writing your signature just above the date. And how we would like to get hold of the man who sends them, just for ten minutes, alone in the woods, with a cannon in our hip pocket. Revenge is sweet, yum, yum, yum.

Lay your paper on the ground when you write, the rougher the ground the better.

Coarse brown wrapping paper is the best for writing your articles on. If you can tear down an old circus poster and write on the pasty side of it with a pen stick, it will do still better.

When your article is completed, crunch your paper in your pocket, and carry it two or three days before sending it. This rubs off the superfluous pencil marks and makes it lighter to handle.

If you can think of it, lose one page out of the middle of your article. We can easily supply what is missing, and we love to do it. We have nothing else to do.

More "Charges" against Garfield.

No. 527. That, during his first term in congress in the year 1864, the said James A. Garfield did feloniously consume the pastry allotted to him by the mistress of his commissariat, otherwise the keeper of his boarding house, by means of a long and flat steel instrument, to-wit: a case-knife, and that in so eating pie with a case-knife the said James A. Garfield did greatly scandalize and shock the said mistress of his boarding house and divers other good and quiet personages and did commit an offense against public morals and the peace and good order of the town.

No. 639. That in the year 1840 being then in his 20th year, the said James A. Garfield did maliciously, wickedly and persistently on one occasion, play hop-scotch in his mother's backyard on the Sabbath day, and that he did play not well but stupidly, ignorantly and without success and thereby did give aid and encouragement to other Sabbath breakers who played against him.

No. 738. That said James A. Garfield in the year 18[illegible]8, and the month of January, being engaged in holding and rocking his then youngest son aged six months and three days at two hours and one-half past midnight and attempting to soothe said son by sundry and divers terms of endearment failing therein did then and there break forth with many unseemly expletives and epithets not fit for ears polite injurious to the feelings of said youngest son and violative of his duty as a husband, a father and law abiding citizen.

And your petitioners will ever pray, etc., etc., etc.

A charge against Mr Garfield which the Tribune will not attempt to palliate or deny is the statement that he conceived, wrote, and printed the following verses in his college magazine—the Williams Quarterly—in 1854:

Old Autumn, thou art here! upon the earth
And in the heavens the signs of death are hung;
For o'er the earth's brown breast stalks pale decay,
And 'mong the lowering clouds the wild winds wail,
And sighing sadly shout the solemn dirge
O'er summer's fairest flowers all faded now,
The winter god descending from the skies
Has reached the mountain tops and decked their brow
With glittering, frosty crowns, and breathed his breath
Among the trumpet pines that herald forth
His coming.

James A. Garfield.

For nearly twenty years he has been not only an active man in public life but one of the ablest, one of the most prominent and one of the most useful members of congress. [illegible] those which [illegible] the range of his inquiry and discussion has gone over all the subjects of public concern and all the fields of statesmanship. He has not allowed his standing in his party and among the public [illegible]. He has always been a [illegible] independent inquirer into the truth and an original as well as comprehensive thinker. There is scarcely a public question of importance on which you may not find in his speeches the most interesting information and a well matured judgment.

WHY?

Democratic Explanations of the Result of the Presidential Election.

Stupid, Blundering, Gigantic Mismanagement, Personal Squabbles, and General Cussedness on the part of the Alleged Leaders and Managers.

[Dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer, Dem.]

New York, Nov 3.—Any man not wishing to deceive and of common quadruped instinct, should have predicted yesterday's result any time since the Indiana election. The parties who failed to carry Indiana, having taken the contract to do it, beat Hancock, and were well aided in it by John Kelly and his court of sorts.

But, beyond these personal causes the democratic party was fairly overmatched in the country, and so has been ever since its congress has been given a respectable trial. Judge Thurman, of Ohio, was long the safe leader of the democracy in congress, but Tilden's designing to run again, killed off Thurman with his tools,—Randall, Dana & Co. [illegible] seeds of rivalry and distrust were sown soon after Hayes' accession all through the democratic leadership. Hendricks encouraged John Kelly to rebel in New York state and was himself stampeded by Bill English, so that New York and Indiana, the centres of the democratic alliance, were worm-holed from the moment Hancock had been nominated. The Maine election was

A FATAL ADVANTAGE

To the democracy arousing the business interest to dread a union of the socialists and the democrats and similar fusions, in the state. Any democratic still hunt after that was impossible. The republicans, with union and sagacity, and money too, won Indiana; and from that moment had command of all the money they wanted to carry New York, and get all the doubtful, uncertain vote everywhere. There being no national statesman to advise John Kelly—or, if need be, to threaten him—that bullhead had the cunning to try to elect the worst ticket that ever he ever put up. Under shelter of Hancock's necessity, he nominated a rich, sallow superstitious tool for mayor of the proudest city in the western world—a man only naturalized here since the close of the rebellion. New York, it is said, never had a mayor not a native of the city or state. Universal sense of outrage was felt, and Kelly, whose ignorant character is also a reflection on his clerical tutors, intensified the disgust by attacking everybody in sight. If another twenty four hours had intervened, Kelly's whole ticket would have been

BEATEN BY 10,000 MAJORITY.

The indignation among democrats who voted for [illegible] that it was elected at all, is prodigious to-night.

Where was the head of the democratic national committee while Kelly was setting things on fire like that? He was right here in New York, but too inadequate to see that proper municipal nominations were necessary to Hancock's carrying this state. Barnum was bending his mulish energies to carry the great state of Connecticut, while Kelly was pulling New York from under Hancock's stool. Meantime the country parts of New York were inflamed by Wade Hampton's silly and egotistical speeches and influenced by a good hop, butter and cheese market, and by the agricultural tariff, which gave the farmer a protection against Canada barley, eggs and potatoes. Nor did Horatio Seymour's speeches, instigating a British import duty against American beef and farm products, scare anybody, because they were far fetched, and concerned the British belly.

THE CANADIAN'S TARIFF

did more to carry New York than the general manufacturing tariff.

It is not Mr Tilden nor any other man, who is to set the party on its feet, but a course of good and prudent behavior, which will get the confidence of the people. Send more young men of conviction and respectability to congress, to regulate the [illegible] there. Let northern democrats criticise southern anomalies, and vice versa, and, above all things let the party press take charge of the party, whose statesmen seem to be defunct or oldish.

Accident took me on election night into the private rooms of Grace, the Irish candidate for mayor, put up by Kelly. I had supposed, from his commercial history, to find a person with a cosmopolitan manner. I saw instead, a smallish, boyish,

VERY COMMONPLACE MILESIAN,

With the air of a grocer clerk, wearing a big teal eye-glass or specs. If he did not appear to know anything about the returns as they came in, could not apply them to the general result and went around the room asking in a helpless way how it looked for him. Twenty or thirty stalwarts, unable or unwilling to tell the truth, congratulated him with prospects of 20,000 majority, while at the same time several of these said to me, aside, that they regarded him as beaten.

To what degree does servility permeate Tammany Hall under Kelly's control that to tell the truth to one of the bosses in Tammany Hall is as bad as bearding Henry VIII, or Lopez of Paraguay. His neighbors and acquaintances said he had spent a cool $100,000 to become mayor, and the notion had entered his head that from the mayoralty he could be governor, and found a breed of Graces in our public history.

After leaving his room one of his confidential men said: "Gentlemen, I fear that he is beaten, and our whole ticket. The republicans

WERE JUST IRRESISTIBLE.

Wherever we put Mr Grace's money it went back on him. The colored people took it everywhere, and not a soul of them voted for him. I went to a Dutch shoemaker to-day," said this person, "and he could not speak a word of English, but I gave him $6 for himself and [illegible] each for his workmen, to take it and vote for Grace. He was willing, but as we got near the polls I saw that he was working something up his sleeve and 'I will give you my word, gentlemen, if it wasn't a ticket for Dowd.' So [I] took the money from him—did not want his vote."

Mr McLean, who held in the latter part of the Tweed ring and under it the street commissionership of New York, said: "I don't feel that it will be of any use to make another fight against the republican party until events adjust themselves. We have now made half a dozen national campaigns against the republicans, and whichever way we face they outmanoeuvre us. Every time they are sure to get the moneyed class and the working class united,—so that with liberal wealth to pay the expenses, and the fears of the poor to do the voting, they recover whatever ground they lose and establish themselves stronger. The country is becoming federalized—I may say imperialized—all the time. There may be a reaction some day against the republican party, but it looks

AS FAR OFF NOW AS IT DID IN 1864,

When we took up McClellan with his great military reputation and [illegible] against the [illegible] public debt and military law. Our leadership has been growing worse and worse for years and this sort of beneath stigma. On the other hand the republicans seem to [illegible] fresh material up [illegible] from the young [illegible] and they produce new leaders [illegible] and pooling their [illegible] some new plans [illegible]."

Mr Havemeyer, [illegible] son of a democratic [illegible] said to me [illegible] When my father was mayor of the city—having [illegible] three times and the only man who ever was the [illegible] mayor of New York—he was [illegible] in his private [illegible] a list of names for [illegible] which [illegible] the prelate [illegible] had requested [illegible] the mayor to make. My father said he would take the paper into consideration.

THAT WON'T DO!

[illegible] this prelate. I am to take back the answer whether you will make these appointments. My father said that he would give the [illegible] due consideration and return an answer on another day. Do you mean to say to [illegible] that you will not make these appointments. The old German blood [illegible] my father [illegible] to his face, and he said: 'I will make no appointment until [illegible].' The prelate then actually [illegible] and said 'You shall hear from me sir!' That happened in the year 1874 and my father did hear of it. [illegible] John Kelly the [illegible] of that church [illegible] my father with all [illegible] they could to break him down, and the old man died at last in the mayor's office from a stroke of apoplexy. He discounted with the administration these people who had caused him [illegible] Kelly's [illegible]

A BRUTAL, DANGEROUS FELLOW,

Who would go to any lengths to get the favor of the prelates. I have mentioned [illegible] have never found as good a tool as he [illegible]."

The republicans just ascribe their success to the magnificent array of stump speakers they sent all over the country. In former years the greatest stump speakers were in the south, but there is not a man of that section effective in the northern stump to-day. They are so far back and away from questions of the present and modern modes of thought that their stump oratory, with its flavor of [illegible], goes over like backwoods [illegible] before cultivated society. The speeches of Henry Ward Beecher, Roscoe Conkling, Robert Ingersoll, Charles Francis Adams, and of Garfield himself are among those most distinctively mentioned.

Mr Hildreth, of the West End hotel, said this afternoon: "I cast my ballot for Hancock, and think he would have made a good president. If he had been nominated in 1876 instead of Tilden, he would have been elected, and inaugurated. We could have made no better nomination in any event, but the management of the democratic party has been

WORSE THAN IMAGINATION COULD HAVE CONCEIVED.

Barnum is the most overrated man in this country. John Kelly has got so little sense and policy that one of the disagreeable things to a democrat is to see his city ticket elected that ought to have been beaten, and he ought to be put out of public life."

Gen Charles Grosvenor said, the day before the election, "I never saw such a campaign in my life as this in New York. I spoke in some of the towns in the western part of the state, and the processions, the uniforms, the torches, the traveling arrangements, and the hospitality beat anything I ever knew. At the town of Bath the Wide Awakes came in hungry, and a requisition was made on the generosity of the people for rations, and they threw open their houses, and in an hour had seats for 1000 men. You could go into a town with about 3000 people, and about three-quarters of the whole population would come to hear you speak. My impression is that the people in New York are mad at Wade Hampton and the egotistics, boasting stump from the south."

Col. James, ex-collector of the port of San Francisco and an intimate friend of Tilden said: "If our case had not been bad enough before, that forged Garfield letter

DID THE BUSINESS FOR US.

I have been something of an expert about letters, and, as soon as I saw that production I knew it to be bogus. I knew that Garfield would never write an answer to a mere question from a stranger and mark the envelope 'personal' and the letter 'private and confidential.' A good many years ago my brother in San Francisco tried a case of a woman who had [illegible] that she wrote a letter of her own to her until she heard it read and he some put the negative on her handwriting. He then investigated the envelope and found that the postmark had been manipulated and the same was the case with the celebrated Morey letter. The postmark was doctored. The republicans have said a great many bad things about us that have not made much impression; but when we espoused a forgery as the last and best campaign argument we had we accused ourselves."

What Preachers should Preach.

[Rev E. E. Hale in North American Review.]

The danger for America is that the pulpit shall be degraded even to a lower level, if the preachers do not bring any growth very best they have; know and believe for the people. 'Preach as if you were preaching to archangels.' That was an injunction of the late Mr Wells, and his obedience to his own injunction gave to his sermons the life and power which quicken to this day every hearer of them. Men may make other limitations to the idea of human equality but we shall all concede that one man has as good a right to the truth as another. And it ought to go without saying that truth is truth, the same in one place as another—in one pulpit as another. There is no such thing as Dutch algebra distinguished from English algebra, nor is there any such thing as Presbyterian truth as distinguished from universal truth. Perhaps the machinery of written creeds deceives men. Perhaps a preacher comforts himself by saying that if a man comes into a Presbyterian church it is to hear the Presbyterian doctrine, and that he hearer takes it for granted that that pulpit will not go further than the Presbyterian standard. This will not do. It may excuse me, in conversation, for refraining to allude to the starvation in Libby prison that I am talking to a reconstructed rebel officer. But when I am in the pulpit it is not etiquette that is at issue. I am there to say what is, and I must not stop short. The whole tangle of authoritative creeds is at the best, embarrassing. They lead a man, from their nature, to try to confine in belief which he once thought he had. They give a fossil form to what should be [illegible], elastic and alive. But, no matter what they do elsewhere, when the preacher enters the pulpit he is free or he is nothing. He is there to say what he believes, not what he wishes to believe, or think it would be well to believe.

St. Louis seems to have fallen far below her great expectations in point of population. Her census ten years ago was doctored or doped by at least 45,000 which was done for the purpose of "beating Chicago" and gaining an extra congressman. She really had about 165,000 inhabitants, but the number was inflated on paper to represent 312,000. This time the enumerators are unable, as yet, to find more than 375,000, and thereupon the city at the big bridge is disgusted with Uncle Sam's census-takers, and wishes the [illegible] would take them. We hope for the reputation of that city that they may be able to scrape up 400,000. As Chicago is high up in the "fours," it would look badly for St Louis to be dragging along for the next ten years in the "threes."

The little cities are worse disgusted than even the big ones. Says a Springfield paper:

There were large expectations of extraordinary growth in most Illinois cities, which, so far as the work now completed indicates, have not been sustained by the actual results. Peoria, which according to the census of 1870 had a population of nearly 23,000 has been claiming at least 40,000 for a year or two past. Quincy, with over 25,000 in 1870, has been claimed for about the same number as Peoria. Springfield had, in round numbers, 17,000 in 1870, and now it fully expected to make a showing of at least 25,000. All these anticipations, it seems, are to be disappointed. The figures of the enumerators cut Peoria down to 27,540. The result from Quincy has not yet been made known, but a similar cry of dismay comes from that city as from Peoria. And Springfield is surprised to find barely 20,000 people, where fully 25 per cent more were supposed to exist.

GOV. THAYER ON THANKSGIVING.

Portland, Nov 17, 1880.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

Some comments having been indulged in regarding the style of the thanksgiving proclamation recently issued by me as governor of this state, which are calculated to create an impression that the form of the document was adopted through a spirit of atheism and fearing that it may operate injuriously to the community, I deem it proper to state that no such impression was intended upon my part. The word 'thanksgiving,' as I understand it, has a fixed significance; the state statute refers to it in that light and Webster defines it as 'a public celebration of divine goodness; also a day set apart for religious services, specially to acknowledge the goodness of God, either in any remarkable deliverance from calamities or danger, or in the ordinary dispensation of His bounties.' With that understanding I have appointed a time as a day of thanksgiving, trusting that its object and purpose would be appreciated without the employment of any set or formal verbiage and that no one however sensitive they might be in the matter of their religious belief would be offended. Yours, respectfully

W. W. THAYER.

Big Horses.

[From the Germantown Telegraph.]

Within the last ten or twelve years there have been a considerable number of Percheron horses imported into this country and now a few Clydesdale. The first is a gray or mottled animal of great weight and heavy proportions, and sometimes as much as 17½ hands high. Few indeed are under 16 hands. They are broad-chested animals with stupendous legs and quarters, and some of them—contrary to their appearance—are quite active upon their feet, being very good steppers. Yet people would not be favorably inclined toward them as roadsters, but for teams and farm work generally one would suppose them to be a rare acquisition, drawing heavy burthens and enduring great hardships.

The Clydesdale horses are generally a very dark bay with black points, and perhaps fully as heavy as the Percheron but not so high. They are Scotch, while the other is French, but resemble each other very much in form. The Clydesdale has been very much in demand for heavy work in London and other large cities up to a very recent period, but strange to say its popularity is waning. At a late public meeting in relation to them as well as to use of all very high and heavy horses, after a full discussion of the question a resolution was adopted in opposition to their use as street draught horses, and an agreement was reached to introduce a lighter animal not over 15 hands in height as being more available for street and road service generally.

Appomattox precinct in Virginia gave the [illegible] a majority of seven.

PURPOSELESS LIVES

From the American school boys what an almost infinite number of paths. The average boy on leaving school does not enter the adjacent college ... to an independent fortune. He must enter one of the paths and pursue it to success, partial success or failure, or wander from path to path, meeting a measure of success in some, meeting failure in others. Each boy has tastes, talents and acquirements evident or latent for some particular path in which, other things being equal, he will achieve the greatest measure of success of which he is capable, and in proportion as he is pushed or wanders aimlessly into a path remote from his true [illegible] he is defrauded out of his best possibilities and society suffers with him.

To question No. 1 in the assembly's shorter catechism, "What is the chief end of man?" Dr Oliver Wendell Holmes once gave the very practical answer in a secular lecture, "To find his own proper place and fill it." If every youth sought and found his proper place this answer and any comment upon it would be superfluous. But the great workshop of society is run by a few experts and a number of first class journeymen, while the majority are botches who turn to this, that or the other industry as circumstances or accident rather than adaptation or qualifications may guide. With the pay roll burdened by such a long list of bunglers who have no call or adaptation to the posts which they assume to fill, it is wonderful that the great concern flourishes as well as it does and turns out such excellent work. A merchant advertises for a clerk and receives more applications than double the number of stores in his line require in his small city or town. A blacksmith advertises for a boy to learn his trade and the number of applicants he receives, if any, may be counted on the fingers of one hand, usually. Yet in any community the number of blacksmith shops equals the dry goods stores, one is as important and honorable an industry as the other, and the probabilities of a competence for old age are beside the forge rather than behind the counter. This state of affairs, which no one will deny to be true, proves that in this direction the law of demand and supply is fearfully out of balance, and it may be well to investigate the subject a little. Let the merchant who advertised ask each one of his applicants separately the question, "Why did you answer my advertisement?" and the answer in nearly every case will be, "because I am out of employment and want a situation." Usually there is no well defined or direct purpose, and the new answer to the question "What is the chief end of man?" is "To secure a situation," and this without special regard to fitness or adaptation for it. The desire to "secure a situation" is commendable, but neglect of the conditions which alone can lead to success in the situations sought is too commonly the rule.

At the end of the last school year, or of the last term, many boys took their books from school, never to return. They are about to enter the paths mentioned, in a competitive race that tries every one and those most severely who are to achieve highest success. Go among these and put the questions, "What is your aim and purpose for life? Which among all the paths have you chosen?" A few will promptly designate theirs and give their reasons, and these are the experts and first-class journeymen aforesaid. The majority will hesitate and answer, "I don't know," perhaps adding, "I hope to secure some good situation." If the same questions were put to these boys' parents the most frequent reply would be, "Well, we don't know, he doesn't seem to express any particular preference as yet, it is difficult to say just what he will do." And this is given in a tone of indifference as if the subject under discussion were the selection of a becoming hat, instead of the most momentous question of a life time. They think, if they think at all, that somehow they do not reason how, their boy must of course occupy a position in society at least equal with their own. The boys of to-day expect, and the expectation is encouraged, to begin life very close to where their fathers left off after years of persistent industry. They leave school and wait listlessly until their parents, relatives or friends secure for them a situation in which the vital question of special selection and adaptation has no part. The situation must give good clothes, soft, clean hands and easy duties or it has no adaptation to their select case. The "chief end" that very many young men now entertain, and by example, if not by definite precept are taught to entertain, is fashionable clothes, a gold watch and chain and a big seal ring; beyond these the future may take care of itself.

And in consequence the pulpit is misused by young men whose true "call" is to the plow or jack plane, and whose "preaching" is a dull repetition of hackneyed texts and cant forms of expression with about as much thought and originality as parrots. Medicine and law are overstocked with men who must prey upon society rather than earn a just reward for value received. Stores, offices, agencies and school rooms are besieged by young persons in search of situations which are supposed to furnish their petty chief end of life, and by their friends in their behalf, while the place of workmen in the thousand mechanical branches go begging to foreigners or await special importations. Consequently these "soft places" are often filled by young men with no adaptation to their pursuits who wander from place to place and come up in semi-idleness and indifference. The "respectable" men who dress well and to the casual observer are supposed to be doing well, who are deeply in debt and dependent wholly or in part for their respectability upon others—this home tramp horde, if their names were published in any community would form a startling array. They were not taught to seek their proper place, they have not stumbled into it. Many of them would not try to fill it if they knew what it was. Respectable society recognizes them so long as they are well dressed and well behaved. They really differ from their ragged and insolent brethren of the highway only in degree.

A writer who usually points his illustrations so as to make them remarkable appl[illegible] a comparison well fit for introduction here. A ship rigged and equipped with sails spread to the breeze outward bound to no definite port, carefully shunning latitudes of fog and ice, courting the gentle trade winds or rotting in regions of protracted calm, touching here and there for food and water, but gathering no cargo and bound nowhere, is an unheard of anomaly. But human lives endowed with gifts to insure a proud success in some career yet seeking not that career, filling no proper place, idly drifting hither and thither, and at last dismantled and dependent hulks stranded along the highways of busy industry are melancholy spectacles, but so common as often to miss special notice. Yet any one who looks about him may see them,—and there are parents without number who are letting their children grow up to be the successors of those who are holding these purposeless, useless and always dependent and miserable lives. The subject is a hackneyed one but it is the great social moral and industrial question of the day, and trite as it may be, it is not likely to get too much attention.

General Hancock was much stronger than his party in the city of New York. His vote in the city was 121,193 while the vote of all the democratic candidates for congress in the city districts foots a total of only 116 [illegible]. Again the vote for the democratic candidate for justice of the court of appeals was only 113 039. These figures show how much stronger Gen Hancock was than his party, and they serve to show also that if the people would not trust him they would trust his party still less.

STATE DEBTS

The International Review for November has an extended article on the history of state debts. The writer shows that this history dates from about the year 1830, when the states of this union owed only about $13,000,000. During the next seven years the greater part of the debt which attracted so much financial and other comment [illegible] was contracted, and [illegible] foundation for a series of financial disasters which [illegible] the credit of our states [illegible] at home and abroad. The increase in the whole public debt of the states from 1830 to 1840 amounted to [illegible] 78,403,084. In 1842 the aggregate debts of the states of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Arkansas, Florida and Mississippi amounted to $[illegible], and in 1850 these states alone owed $[illegible], an increase of $87,266,010. The state debts of the different sections of the country, as near as can be ascertained with the meager data attainable, were as follows June 25 1842:

Eastern states	[illegible]
Middle states	[illegible]
Southern states	[illegible]
Western states	[illegible]
Total	$ [illegible]

Perhaps it will be a surprise to most readers to learn that the aggregate indebtedness of our states is not much greater now than it was in 1842. But this writer gives us statistics from good authority making the total at this time $2[illegible]0,732,081, or about $[illegible] 000,000 more than in 1842. The increase has been wholly in the New England and southern states, the aggregate indebtedness of the middle and western states being much less than it was then. Two years ago the indebtedness was about $10,000,000 more than now. The reduction is due to considerable payments by the middle and western states and the repudiation of enormous sums by the states of the south. The whole amount repudiated or scaled down by twelve southern states since 1842 is stated at $159,237,942.

In searching for the cause of the democratic defeat the New York World does not go far from home. Nor does it attribute the defeat to "republican frauds," as the shallow party organs do. It says plainly that Hancock was defeated because of the reduced democratic majorities in the cities of New York and Brooklyn, and this reduction it attributes to "the incompetency of local democratic leaders." This may not be the whole reason of the defeat, but it should end the "fraud" cry. Incompetent local leadership no doubt was a factor, but there was the additional and greater reason that the position of the republican party commended itself to the judgment of the class representing the great business interests of the metropolis. The World takes no stock in the twaddle about "fraud," and sees clearly enough that there are sufficient causes for the democratic defeat without falling back on this shallow pretense.

Efforts to extend polygamy in Utah by obtaining recruits from Europe are still actively pushed, though the public hears little about it of late. W P Letchworth, of New York who is investigating the poverty and public charities of Europe, writes that a Mormon emigration from some parts of Europe is going forward under direction of traveling agents of the Utah Mormons. He adds that when he was in Copenhagen on the 29th of August he saw 100 fresh converts embark on a steamer for Hull en route to America, men, women and children were huddled indiscriminately together for a two days' trip under objectionable conditions.

PATRONIZE
HOME INDUSTRIES!
PIONEER
White Lead.

REASONS WHY IT SHOULD BE PREFERRED TO ALL OTHERS:

First—It is STRICTLY PURE. It is WHITER, is FINER GROUND, is FRESH, has BETTER COVERING POWER, is MORE DURABLE and is LOWER PRICED than any foreign or imported brands.

The IMPORTED LEADS are OLD, are DRY and HARD, COVERED WITH SKINS. The OIL IS SOAKED INTO THE WOOD, and a very LARGE QUANTITY OF OIL, which is HIGHER COST than the Lead, MUST BE ADDED to make them fit for use, and thus making it cost, at present market prices, at least 10 per cent. more than the PIONEER.

Second—The PIONEER LEAD is strictly a HOME MANUFACTURE. EVERY DOLLAR SPENT IN ITS MANUFACTURE IS DISTRIBUTED ON THIS COAST to the MINERS, SMELTERS and REFINERS, MECHANICS, FARMERS AND LABORERS.

The LEAD ORE is mined on this coast.

The PIG LEAD is smelted and refined on this coast.

The POTS, MACHINERY and other appliances are made on this coast.

The MECHANICS and LABORERS are our own population.

The SEED from which the OIL is extracted is GROWN on this coast.

The OIL is MANUFACTURED on this coast by the PACIFIC OIL WORKS, and of a quality superior to any made elsewhere. GUARANTEED PURE and FREE from ADULTERATION with cotton seed, mustard seed and Fish Oil, so COMMON with ALL THE EASTERN OIL IMPORTED.

The manufacture of the PIONEER WHITE LEAD EMPLOYS constantly ONE HUNDRED MEN.

The manufacture of the Oil by the PACIFIC OIL WORKS EMPLOYS constantly FIFTY MEN.

BRIEF NOTES

Chimes of Normandy this evening

The steamer Oregon will sail hence to-morrow morning

Due here to-morrow evening—steamer State of California

The council adjourned last night to meet next Monday at 7 P M

The trestle work of the east side railroad at the lower ferry is undergoing repairs

The political tempest is subsiding and the country is settling down to a state of tranquillity

Archbishop Seghers will deliver a lecture at Astoria to-morrow evening for the benefit of St. Mary's hospital

Owing to continued cool and dry weather the Willamette has fallen so that boats do not run higher than Salem for the present

Now is the time for husbands to get the paper early and cut out the advertisements of places where seal skin sacques are sold. A cut in time often saves $175

Isn't it kind o' curious that no woman goes to the telephone to answer a ring without wondering if her hair is all right and her train is in proper shape?

Striped stockings are going out of fashion and soon the back yards of our first families on wash days will not resemble a collection of the flags of all nations

The fall poets should chip in and erect a monument to the man who invented the names of the months. Where would they be if he had not put in September to rhyme with remember?

When the autumn tints the foliage,
Turning leaves to red and gold
Then its well the stoop to vacate
Or she'll catch her death of cold
And you'll leave her softly murmuring
When your time you have outstayed
"Dow goo'iby bust he goin—
Good night derlig cub agaid!"

THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 18, 1880.

A MAIDEN'S MESSAGE.

O wind, that wanderest o'er hill, and vale and sea,
Blow round the home where he sleeps peacefully,
And breathe upon his brow a loving kiss from me.

O golden "maiden moon," so calm and pure and bright;
Shed round and o'er him thy soft, tender streams of light;
Tell him how well I love him—tell him so to-night.

O stars, all silvery bright, set on that deep, still blue—
Stars that are watching o'er us both the long night through,
Tell him my love for him is pure like you—and true.

O great, grand, snow-white clouds—slow drifting o'er the sky—
Bear to his heart a message as ye pass him by,
Tell him my love would teach him how to do—or die.

O great, wide sea, on which the night winds blow,
Sing in his ears thy music calm and slow,
Sing to his heart I love him—sing it soft and low.

O tiny, laughing ripples, dancing on the shore—
O mighty ocean waves, thundering your ceaseless roar—
Tell him I love so well I could not love him more!

O moon and stars—O clouds and deep, blue, sunny sea,
And restless, wandering winds, bear him these words from me:
"My own dear love, I love thee well—and constantly."

—Good Words.

MANAGEMENT OF ONIONS.

Onions are perhaps the hardest of all the root crops to raise. People have a natural feeling that they do not wish to crawl around in the hot sun weeding onions. Sugar beets, parsnips, carrots, beets, turnips, etc., are tended and gathered with much less labor, and much less risk; consequently those who are willing to "crawl" to onions have an advantage, for it is well known that onions usually bring a higher price in proportion than other roots. It frequently happens that a large proportion of the onions fail to ripen, and stand up green and growing with no prospect of ripening off, while the rest of the crop is dry and ready to gather. This is often the case when the crop is grown on rich land or when manured with undecomposed manure. There have been various methods suggested to hasten the ripening of onions, such as rolling a barrel over the tops to bend them down, etc., but the best way, after an examination has shown that the bulk of the crop has dried up in the natural way, is to pull the whole crop and let it dry several days in the sun. It is customary to pull four rows together and spread them evenly about a foot wide upon the land where they grow. After they have dried a sufficient time, say one week at the longest, cut them by beginning with two rows of onions, using a pair of sharp shears or a small sharp knife, cutting the top off from the onions about an inch and a half from the bulb and throwing them into baskets, the small ones separate from the larger ones, and those that have a green top in still another basket, making three kinds. Two persons cutting together can cut the onions much faster than they could if cutting from a pile, and this saves all the trouble of carrying them to the house; then they are ready to spread, making one less handling, for onions are liable to injury from bruises and rough handling, the same as squash or apples. A bruise injures the keeping quality of an onion.

The small onions are sold for pickles, or kept to set out early in the spring for "rareripes," as they are called; the onions with the green necks are good to sell at once at one-half or three-fourths the value of the well-ripened roots, for they must be used at once if at all, as they will not keep at most more than a few weeks. Those onions that have no bulbs at the root, but are simply a green stalk—no matter how many of them there may be, or how much one may wish to utilize them—must be left on the ground as useless.

The sound onions should be spread in a loft, or some dry, sheltered place, about one foot thick (not more than that) and left to dry where they can remain till the approach of severe cold weather, when they must be placed where the frost can not reach them, if the supply is to be constantly drawn upon for marketing; but if it is desired to keep them over for the spring market, a slight freeze will not hurt them, provided they are not disturbed while frozen. A uniform temperature of about 40 degrees is most suitable for keeping onions.

After taking the crop from the land, the ground should be hoed over to clear it of weeds and the weeds, onions and onion-tops left on the land should be carried off and the land left clear for the next year's crops; for it is an acknowledged fact that onions succeed better when planted on the same ground year after year. There are pieces of land on which onions have been successfully grown for more than 25 years.

Till the habits and needs of an onion are thoroughly learned by some years of experience in growing them (or sooner by careful study and observation) the growth of this crop in a satisfactory and profitable manner is a perplexing, contradictory, surprising and often unprofitable business. There are cultivators, however, who go about this work with as much assurance of ultimate and yearly success as any one can have in regard to any crop, because they follow certain rules in culture, which, followed, will bring almost uniform success.

Care of Fowls.

[From the Turf, Field and Farm.]

There are few branches of farming that pay as well as this, according to the amount invested. A few fowls on any farm can, with proper care, be made to pay a very large percentage of profit with a small outlay.

A pullet that during her first winter will not produce at least from forty to sixty eggs is a poor thing at the best and the market or a Sunday dinner is the only place where she can be put with profit. Give the best place that can be provided for fowls to winter in. We do not mean anything that is costly or expensive to keep up, but good sensible quarters where they will not be disturbed, and have all the sunshine possible, with a dry, pure atmosphere. The earth itself makes a good floor for a henhouse when properly cared for. As an incentive, however, for such care, a plank floor is superior to all others, which should be kept covered with dry earth or sand, which if occasionally renewed and carefully saved will be one of the best fertilizers on the farm. The food should be of a quality that will tend to the production of eggs, for we are going to winter a large portion of the fowls for profit.

Fowls, on going into winter quarters, at first seem to relish and it really does them the most good, to be fed for a time on solid grain. That which is most universally given is corn, but if we expect to get the most good out of them in the way of eggs, it will not do to give them too much solid grain, so let their food be changed every few days, giving as a change any grain that can be spared. They relish it the best when picked from the ground, but a better way is to mingle the food with a suitable variety and then feed from a trough suitable for the purpose, keeping it before them all the time. A good way to do with laying fowls is to change their food entirely every week, giving one week cooked food, such as boiled corn and potatoes or scalded meal, the next week giving dry grain and some kind of raw flesh or beef scraps broken into pieces about the size of kernels of corn. We have tried letting them pick it from the cake but do not like that manner of feeding. Also provide them with oyster shells, pounded bone and gravel. Never let it go out of mind that fowls like some kind of green food during the winter and be sure to give them a quantity now and then, just as often as they seem to relish it. They are extremely fond of cabbage, while turnips cut fine and fed to them are always welcomed. An excellent plan is to feed them every week or two a mess of grain boiled with some red pepper pods in it. Be sure and have before them at all times a well filled box of ashes and dry earth; if a little sulphur is mixed with it all the better, as great care must be taken to see that they are not infested with insects, which are always troublesome. Always keep before them a good supply of good, pure water, which important matter is often neglected, and in winter it is a good plan to bring it up to the temperature of rain water by heating.

A Sorgo Convention.

[From the Rural World.]

Those who are interested in the culture of sorgo and in making syrup and sugar therefrom should not fail to be present at the meeting of the Mississippi valley cane growers' association in St. Louis, on the 21st of December next. It is not doubted that the cultivation of sorgo and the manufacture of syrup and sugar will become one of the great industries of the country. The object of the coming convention is to bring together the growers and manufacturers of this important product to discuss varieties, culture, manufacture, etc.—to obtain the combined experience of the votaries of this industry so that each one may profit by what he may learn from the others. Then there will be samples of sugar and syrup and essays, speeches and discussions, all tending to throw light upon the culture of sorgo and its manufacture into a staple for which there is a growing demand, and for which there will be a demand as wide as is our country. Indeed we expect to live to see the day when instead of our country paying out over $100,000,000 a year for sugar it will be receiving that amount from foreign nations for the same commodity. The sugar beet, from which millions of dollars worth of sugar are made annually in Europe cannot compare with sorgo for sugar purposes. The culture of the beet is attended with great labor and expense, and there is no corresponding return except in the juice, while with sorgo there is no expense whatever for the raw juice, as the seed of the sorgo for feeding all kinds of stock is as valuable as corn raised on the same area, and will more than pay for the cultivation and delivery of the cane at the mill. This country is exporting all kinds of live stock, all kinds of cereals, butter, cheese, apples, etc., and the day is fast coming when it will likewise be exporting syrups and sugars from sorgo for the very good reason it can produce them cheaper than any other nation in the world. It behooves the American farmer therefore to look well into this great industry; to post himself in regard to it; to take hold of it; to take hold of it with that energy and vigor and intelligence for which he is so much noted.

In trade circles the day has been devoid of any transactions of material importance. The wheat market is still tending upward, and holders are firm in demanding full rates, which buyers in most cases pay sparingly as yet. The gradual hardening in freight rates checks the rise in wheat which has been looked for during a week past. As long as ship owners and agents advance the price of freights to correspond with the improvement of the foreign wheat market, so long will shippers here decline to raise their offers for the cereal. Hence we can quote at no better figure here to-day than yesterday, and that the market is in statu quo is about all that can be said.

Flour is in fair supply, with a reasonably good demand for local consumption and for shipment to points to the north.

Provisions have been moved in somewhat increased volume for a few days past, but all offers are taken up at quotations, while some shipments from San Francisco are still made. The last ten days have been most favorable to packers and the stocks in hand have been considerably increased. Prices are well maintained. Other articles of domestic produce are steady and in good demand.

The scarcity of tonnage at hand is evidently hampering the commerce of this coast at this time as will be seen by reference to our dispatches from San Francisco, where vessels suitable even for the coal trade cannot be secured, a fact which has materially advanced the price of coal in that city. The few arrivals of wheat ships for two weeks past, has been a factor in the calculations upon the future of the cereal in the home market. Two or three vessels now in port are held at figures considerably above the views of exporters.

NEW YORK FREIGHTS AND MARKETS.

[SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The freight market remains much as heretofore noted, fairly active. Tonnage is in fair supply, but is held somewhat above views of agents. An offer was made this afternoon for a ship to follow the Meroe for Portland, which vessel will be loaded by the 4th proximo.

Steamer freights are rather more active and Saturday's steamer will have a good cargo for California.

Markets not very active; wheat ⅜@½c higher on a better export demand, but the demand was not general, though shippers had new orders at limits in many cases so low as to be unable to fill them on an advanced market.

Barley relapsed into dullness.

Pork steady. Lard 3@5c higher.

Rio Coffee—Quiet, nominal.

Refined Sugars—Fair demand, firmer on hards.

Hops—Still free export demand; prices steady.

Hides—More active under concessions.

Advance in Bagging.

Advices from Calcutta report an advance in bags, and this market is firm at quotations. Gunnies are scarce and higher, none now being held in first hands; wool bags firm at 40½@41½c, March delivery.

CAN'T PREACH GOOD.

No man can do a good job of work, preach a good sermon, try a law suit well, doctor a patient, or write a good article when he feels miserable and dull, with sluggish brain and unsteady nerves, and none should make the attempt in such condition when it can be so easily and cheaply removed by a little hop bitters. See "Truths" and "Proverbs," other column.

45 Years Before the Public.

THE GENUINE

DR. C. McLANE'S

CELEBRATED

FOR THE CURE OF

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them A FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN

The Most Successful Physician on the Pacific Coast.

IN THE TREATMENT OF ALL CHRONIC AND DIFFICULT DISEASES

DR. BRENAN WILL GUARANTEE TO CURE any form of disease of the generative organs or private disease.

He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the

FOLLIES OF YOUTH,

Such as SPERMATORRHEA, or SEMINAL WEAKNESS, or LOSS OF PERFECT VITALITY. Nearly two-thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring either directly or indirectly from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit these diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organization broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.

Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances.

Lost manhood perfectly restored.

Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint and all Diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder, he can cure without fail.

Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for list.
